

Barry Edward Fitzgerald- digital storytelling project

This digital storytelling project creates a website for a piece of action research about child protection in Ireland. The research which will begin in October 2021 will seek to generate knowledge about the experiences and rights of parents in the child protection system with a view to enhancing their inclusion and participation in it. The website will initially (for the purposes of this post grad) provide information about the planned research, a knowledge base about the area the research covers (child protection law and policy) and an opportunity for prospective research participants to enlist in it. Subsequently, (after this postgrad) when research commences and as it progresses, the website will grow to become the forum in which the research is mediated and documented.
